

Male Gymnast from Rhode Island Gymnastics Team Shines at National Competition

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE MAY 17, 2013

Aim High Academy of East Greenwich, Rhode Island, a leading youth gymnastics, athletic and educational center, is pleased to announce today that Aidan Cuy, a competitive male gymnast with Aim High Academy, earned top honors at the Junior Olympic Men's National Championships, which was held in Portland, Oregon on May 1st - May 5th 2013.

Cuy competed in the preliminary round on May 3rd; after the first day of competition he placed 4th in the AA and qualified for Finals, held on Sunday, May 5th. At the conclusion of the meet, Cuy received the highest combined score on the parallel bars and was crowned National Champion. He also received a silver medal on vault.

"We are all very proud of Aidan for his outstanding achievement at the Junior Olympic Men's National Championships," says Amy Nelson, President of Aim High Academy. She adds, "We are looking forward to watching and supporting his ongoing success."

For more information about all of Aim High Academy's programs visit www.aimhighacademy.com.

Aim High Academy offers many programs for children of all ages including gymnastics, preschool and camps. Aim High Academy strives to challenge each student in a fun and caring environment, while encouraging each child to develop at his or her own pace.